A Sunbonnet Sue Rags to Riches Tale

These quilt blocks were discarded by an unknown person. They were found and given to me, who ripped out the original embroidery and sashing and started the quilt all over again. To sum up, this anonymous failed quilting effort became a creative challenge for me, and I hope the finished product recalls a pleasant childhood memory in all its viewers.

Mama Sacks of Many Colors

There is a great story about this quilt. Squares were found in the bottom of a box when we were cleaning out mother's house when she passed away. I was the only sister that cared about sewing, so I inherited it. There was a note in the box that it was made by my great grandmother Watson. It was made out of sugar and flour sacks. I decided I would finish it in memory of my wonderful Papa and Mama Watson.
